

ABSTRACT

A stabilizing device comprises a flexible member coupled at one end to a handgrip and at the other end to a retraction mechanism, which tends to urge the flexible member in a retraction direction. The retraction mechanism may operate linearly or rotationally. A user is stabilized by grasping and pulling the handgrip in an extension direction opposite the retraction direction.